

Learn Turkish

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 13 September 2009
Last Updated Monday, 14 September 2009

Learn Turkish

Would you like to learn some of the Turkish language

If you are looking in on this section, then it is likely that like us you have an interest in learning Turkish. On our sisters site forum we are hoping to start a group, there will be no teachers there, but we have some very good Turkish lessons to follow and loads of help to guide us through. So why not join us and learn with us. This will not be like attending an evening class, study when it's best for you, if you miss a day or even 10, unlike a class, you wont have been left behind. The group will still be here ready for you to pick up where you left off.

Unlike many Turkish lessons we will do our best to make learning a little more fun. You will not be seeing long lists of words to remember or subjected to intense grammer lessons. You will learn by converstion. You will be given a full conversation that is easily indentified with (in Turkish) also enough words and clues to allow you to easily translate back into English and by the time you have completed the translation without even trying you will find a lot has sunk in. Go through the conversation as many times as you need and hey presto its time to go out and practise what you've learnt.

Just 1 Rule - Enjoy Teaching Yourself, Have Fun Learning and Don't Stress. Always remeber we are a group and there will be times when one of us will find a certain excercise difficult to understand, thats the time to post a message, let someone else who is finding that particlar part easier help you along. Liklehood is that you will be able to help them through a difficult stage at some time.

Whenever you choose to learn, make yourself as comfortable as you can, be relaxed, dont struggle if the excersie gets too difficult put it down and come back to it later. No need to sit in front of the computer, just copy of the part you need.

Index to Lessons

Chapter One